

Professional experience:

2002 to present:

Of counsel to Larry G. Johnson, Attorney at Law, a boutique law firm with emphasis on electronic discovery law and the technologies and best practices relating to electronic discovery, and President of Legal Technology Group, Inc.

2000-2002:

Chief Technical Officer, Fios, Inc., a vendor of electronic discovery services.

1982 to present:

Howe & Associates, a law firm with chief emphasis on a litigation practice in Portland, Oregon. Founder and President of Control Center Computing, Inc., a software company that develops applications for law firms and other professional offices throughout the United States. These applications use ASP.NET, VB.NET, SQL Server, Exchange Server, and XML.

Education:

Bachelor of Science, Portland State University

Doctor of Jurisprudence, Northwestern School of Law at Lewis and Clark College.

Publications and Speaking Engagements:

Spoken at over 50 Software Developer Conferences around the world (United States, Europe, Asia and Australia) including Microsoft Tech*Ed, Microsoft Exchange Conferences, Advisor Conferences, Connections Conferences, Informant Conferences and others. Because of intimate knowledge of Microsoft applications, including server-side databases, part of an exclusive Inner Circle at Microsoft that is given advance knowledge of new technologies and products in order to teach them world-wide to major application developers prior to product launch.

Produced Outlook/Exchange development videos for Keystone Learning Systems and co-authored Access 2000 and 2002 Development Unleashed by SAMS Publishing.

Technical Editor of VB.NET Journal, published by Advisor Media.

Presented numerous CLE's to bar associations on the uses of technology by law firms.

Bar Affiliations:

Member of the Oregon and Washington State Bar Associations

Other:

Faculty Instructor, National Judicial College, Reno, Nevada: technical section of Complex Litigation Course, July, 2004.

